

Those of greed and devilish ways,
Have justly gone to watery graves.
Their future lies beneath the earth,
Lost for good, and lacking mirth.
It's those with wind to fill their sails,
Who seek an old maid's pirate tales,
That soar like gulls above the sea
And carry always Blackbeard's key.

