YOU CAN'T MILK A DANCING COW

By Tom Dunsmuir
Illustrated by Brian T. Jones

P - o - o - r Farmer Picket!

When Mrs. Picket says, “I have an idea” – watch out! Since she made the cows raincoats with her new sewing machine, they won't come into the barn to be milked. The chickens are too busy promenading around the barnyard in their new bonnets and sunglasses to lay eggs. And how is a rooster supposed to wake up early when he's so cozy in his new flannel pajamas and cap? Children of all ages will love Mrs. Picket's very contemporary solution for these and the other dilemmas Farmer Picket faces when his wife begins creating animal fashion. Yes, she's designing couture for critters!

Kids have always been fascinated with farms and barnyard animals, and YOU CAN'T MILK A DANCING COW offers a hilarious, lighthearted look at farm life, with a fresh new twist.

Tom Dunsmuir is a children's television writer who has won Emmy awards for his work on both “Sesame Street” and “The Electric Company.” While writing for these shows, he also wrote three books: There's No Place Like Home, Love of Chair, and Fargo North Decoder and His Coat and Hat. He lives in Pacific Palisades, CA, with his wife, Joan, and their dog, Sadie.

Brian T. Jones is a graduate of Kenyon College with a BA in studio art and of Otis College of Art and Design with a BFA in illustration. He and his wife, Jenny, live in Playa del Rey, CA.
